

Competitor Research

Competitors
mindbody	momence	OfferingTree
Limitations
• High Costs • Difficult cancellation terms • Poor customer support • Too many new functionalities • Frequent app glitches	• AI service feature is poor. • Reporting functionality is poor. Too many steps to access information. • No "off switch" or bulk editing option for cancelling member subscriptions. • There is no account deletion.	• Reporting complexity • Too many functionalities.
Brainstorming
• Costs may be influenced by the extensive infrastructure, complex functionality and services required to maintain an all-in-one business management platform. Additional costs may also apply for API access and other services. • Users may experience confusion surrounding cancellation policies. Policies may be difficult to understand or may not be visible or	• Implement a selection function that allows users to bulk edit member subscriptions, such as deleting or modifying multiple subscriptions simultaneously. • Implement an account deletion function to give users greater control over their account and personal information. • Implement an effective AI-powered customer support function to	• OfferingTree has received positive feedback for its user experience. It would be useful to use OfferingTree as a foundation for identifying effective design approaches for our project. • Reported bugs highlight the importance of effective bug identification and management. We should establish a process for reporting, prioritising, tracking and accessible when users need them. • The extensive range of features may create unnecessary complexity for businesses and users who only require basic functionality. Frequent changes to the platform may also create challenges for existing users adapting to new features. • Some users report difficulties with customer support, highlighting an opportunity to investigate how support services could be made more accessible and effective.	assist users with common queries. • Minimise unnecessary functionality and complexity to provide a simple and intuitive user experience. • Similar issues as mindbody.	resolving bugs throughout development. • The extensive range of functionalities may divert attention from essential features such as class scheduling and registration. Our website should therefore prioritise simplicity and focus on the core needs of yoga businesses and their customers.

---	--	---

Momence

TheMovementCreative • 1mo ago

Momence customer support is far and away the least helpful customer support experience I have ever had.

They cannot meaningfully engage with an issue or commit to resolution. They are misleading and confusing time and time again.

We have been on momence for a few years now and it especially got worse after their acquisition. Prior to that it was actually one of my best customer support experiences.

The software itself is also ill suited to my type of business because we work with kids and their youth account system is wonky - making billing information, customer communication, and enrollment information difficult to navigate on client side and company side.

The decisions momence has made and not made has cost my business thousands in revenue. Would recommend to steer clear.

LonelyNoise7836 • 3mo ago

I would'nt recommend Momence at all. The support from Momence has been nothing short of pathetic and even after they set it up for me there were numerous mistakes that were made on their end. And it costs way too much. There are better and cheaper options.

Otherwise-Nothing648 • 5mo ago

Sorry about the troubles with Momence. I have heard the customer support has gotten worse. If you're looking at switching, I would recommend booking demos with a few providers. I'd check out OfferingTree and vagaro as possible options

SearchNo8132 • 4mo ago

I would not recommend Momence at all. We worked with Momence for 2 years, but they were bought by a venture capital firm in 2025 and things have really started going downhill. It started with people not being able to use gift cards they bought. I tried to get support from their team but they said they are going through and upgrade which would make gift cards invalid for a while. They didn't tell any of their customers about this change and then left the studios to deal with their customers without any support.

More recently they shut off most of our features even though we had paid $400 for their platform. It takes 5 days to get a hold of their billing team. It has been an absolute nightmare to get this bug resolved.

tldr stay away from Momence, their tech and customer service have gone downhill

Rare_Mode1880 • 1y ago

Honestly I hate all these companies for not showing prices upfront!!

We used Momence Q before and paid $200/month plus 3.9% + $0.30 per payment. Way too expensive for a small studio. Setup was painful, managing everything was a hassle, and clients didn't enjoy the experience either.

We switched last year to Time2book Q and started at $19/mo. No hidden prices, everything is clear on their website pricing page. Had everything live in under an hour and could share our booking link right away. Clients love how simple it is. We've also noticed more new clients coming in, most likely because it's so easy to sign up, purchase, and book in just a few seconds.

Horror-Attention-550 • 27d ago

Momence is predominantly AI customer service now which is why I left. It wasn't always the case but it makes solving problems efficiently really frustrating.

MINDBODY

Material_Spirit348 • 9mo ago

MB was incredibly expensive and bloated with a ton of features we didn't need; the ones we did need were totally clunky and unintuitive. Also over the years their price went up and their support got worse and worse.

We finally switched to Gymdesk and absolutely love it. Cheap, does everything we need it to, has a web version and an app for clients, lots of ease of communication. A big one for us - we can text through Gymdesk (they set us up with a separate phone # basically) which means we no longer have to use personal cell phones for texting when time is of the essence. Also their support is still super high touch and helpful if we do have questions.

Also we had to fight with MINDBODY when canceling because they tried to say we'd signed a yearlong contract and it had just re-upped. They wanted us to pay something like $4500 to buy out of it - which is asinine for a software. Eventually they relented but that sealed it for me.

↑ 3 ↓

OneApplication6655 • 3y ago

Studio manager here. We recently ditched MindBody for Momence, and we're very happy with it. It's much more streamlined and easy to navigate. MindBody is the "standard," but it's also bloated and overly complicated and gave us so many headaches. Momence is perfect for our small studio, and has fantastic customer support.

↑ 1 ↓

pilatesitslife • 10mo ago

Im experiencing the same thing

Signed the 26 october to test the platform and im trying to cancel they are passing me agent from agent its horrible i never experienced this in my life

↑ 3 ↓

jalvarado4 • 10mo ago

i work for momence and we've been helping people get out of their contracts, but recently i worked with a studio owner who reached out to minbody to cancel and migrate her info. they denied her request and said they "couldn't do it during holiday season" and would have to reconnect after the new year.

↑ 1 ↓

AfraidAdagio6338 • 9mo ago

Totally feel this. I've been through the same pain with Mindbody. The glitches, the billing issues, the support runaround... all of it. I've tried a few other platforms over the years (PushPress, Glofox, Momence), and honestly any of them were already better than Mindbody in terms of reliability and transparency.

Right now I'm on Vibefam, and it's been a breath of fresh air compared to the chaos Mindbody put me through. Way smoother experience for both me and my clients.

↑ 1 ↓

No_Witness3153 • 8mo ago

Mindbody is literally the final boss of bad contracts lol. Honestly, once you're finally free, if you're in the UK/EU just go with Treatwell. I've seen so many people make the swap and it's a total 180. No glitchy widgets and the migration is actually smooth - they don't try to hold your data hostage. It's way more intuitive for clients too, so you can stop playing tech support and actually run your business.

↑ 1 ↓

Offering Tree

Minute-Cricket-7198 • 2mo ago

Offering Tree is great. Super easy, cost efficient and excellent customer service. Plus, the platform is growing and more options are being added by the day. Easy for creating class sign ups, workshops, and online digital libraries. Highly recommend.

shamochan • 2mo ago

I love offering tree. It has everything I could imagine needing and is easy to use.

The only thing I don't like is that it connects to Stripe and Stripe requires a phone number and address that is visible to clients. This is hard when you are a mobile studio, but want your personal details to remain private. I paid for a business phone number.

↑ 3 ↓

Capable-Alfalfa4585 • 2mo ago

I am honestly shocked to see so much enthusiastic support for offeringtree. The opposite of my experience! Offeringtree has been the cheapest option for what I need, with crappy back-end experience for me and mediocre-bad front-end experience for my video library members. Ive been desperate to transition to another platform for the last 2 years and am grateful to be in that transition right now. Im moving to HeyClients, which is WAY more expensive but still less expensive than UScreen (the absolute best in the industry). HeyClients has more features included that allows me to cancel other add on bits like calendly, kit, and manychat.

One more note to be specific, my video library has grown to 150+ classes, and after about 50 videos the experience started getting slower and glitchy-er the more content I add. About twice a week when I go to my site I get an error screen, and have to either refresh several times or just wait a half hour and try again. This has been consistent for at least the last 6 months and is not acceptable for the level of business I'm running.

Best wishes for your online yoga work wherever you choose

↑ 2 ↓

angus-b-18 • 1mo ago

OfferingTree is properly built for solo teachers and priced for it, which is why it keeps coming up here. Movement sits in the same bracket, similar scope with the video and membership side included, and the pricing is public so you can compare in about five minutes.

What I'd ask both of them is what happens to your student list and their recurring payments if you ever leave. That's what decides whether it can grow with you, and neither says much about it up front.

↑ 1 ↓